

Press Release

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

JMJ is a Proud and Honored Supporter of the Fourth Inaugural Construction Safety Week 2017—U.S. Safety at Work Activity

AUSTIN, TEXAS, March 31 2017—JMJ is proud to support the fourth annual Construction Industry ‘Safety Week’ 2017, to be held from May 1 to May 5 2017.

The Safety Week effort, initiated by CEOs and leaders from fifty national and global construction firms representing the Construction Industry Safety Initiative (CISI) group and the Incident and Injury-Free™ (IIF™) CEO Forum, is aimed to inspire everyone in the construction industry to be leaders in safety. Over the course of the week, thousands of people around the world will engage in activities related to safety in the workplace. JMJ is proud and honored to support them for the fourth year and to be part of this journey to lead the industry toward a way of working in which no one is injured.

Following the great success of last year’s Safety Week in 2016, this year’s effort is intended to encourage large and small contractors across the world to join in elevating and celebrating safety with the goal of eliminating worker injury in an industry where incidents continue to occur. While strides are being made to improve safety in the world of construction, the industry still experienced approximately 937 fatal work injuries in 2015, according to the most recent Bureau of Labor Statistics data.

“At JMJ, our deepest commitment is to the safety, health and well-being of every single person on every single worksite around the world,” says Camille Ford, Senior JMJ Consultant. “This Safety Week initiative is an inspiring action on the part of U.S. Construction Industry leaders to ensure this commitment to safety becomes a reality inside the industry. We are proud to stand in partnership with this effort, furthering the message that a Construction Industry where no one is hurt is not only a possibility, but a necessity.”

To support the Safety Week initiative, a Safety Week website (www.constructionsafetyweek.com) is available to assist with the sharing of information and ideas promoting safety throughout the construction industry. The website has step-by-step planning tips for organisations to host their own safety week events, as well as best practices on how to strengthen their safety culture.

Join and follow the Safety Week 2017 conversation on social media using the hashtag #safetyweek. For more information on Safety Week, visit www.constructionsafetyweek.com.

About JMJ Associates

JMJ is a global management consulting company with 30 years of experience serving the energy, manufacturing, mining and construction industries. We partner with leading organisations to see new possibilities, align on ambitious goals and achieve breakthrough performance in safety, productivity, reliability, efficiency and quality. JMJ has a proven track record of enabling cultural transformation that delivers sustainable and extraordinary organisational and project performance. Our approach directly impacts intangible areas including leadership, culture, relationships, moral and employee engagement to rapidly generate tangible business results. More information can be found at www.jmj.com

#

For further information contact:

Chloé Handley

Chandley@jmj.com